Antique Electronic Supply (602-820-5411) stocks 5 pin coil forms, p/n
PC-211. They're a bit pricey at $4.20 each. 5-pin sockets (p/n PS-181) are $3.50 each from the same outfit.

Alternatively, as I believe Boatanchor Bob has suggested here before, use an octal tube base from a dud tube and a length of 1 1/4 inch diameter PVC pipe from the hardware store.

-Steve

If the CW WW 160 Meter CW Contest is on this weekend, I think we ought to QSY on Friday and Saturday night from the traditional Glowbug 160M territory of 1802R5khz to 3535khz. Usual times of 0300-0500Z or thereabout will work fine. The skip may be long for the usual locals, but maybe there will be some interest in the others out beyond the Big Muddy in them thar afar-off Western Territories. I may even get the 80 meter Hartley on-line for the fun of it.

Hello all,

Just wanted to announce that 22 high-quality photos taken by our own NA4G, Bob, of his masterpiece Glowbug etherwarmers are now available at the site triode.cc.tntech.edu in the pub/photos directory. The photos are na4g01 thru na4g22 in both the .gif and .jpg format and there is an index file in the photos directory to tell you what is what. Feel free to log on and look around and take whatever you want. If you have any photos or schematics you would like to contribute feel free to do so.... just leave them in the incoming directory.

Please use your e-mail address or your call as the password. Drop by soon and let Bob know what you think.....and also join us on 1803 Kc/s in the late evening hours for a chat. If you phone guys don't want to use cw, drop me a note and we will work out something.

73 all and ZUT!
